training program for the development of the candidate in clinical research. The training program will be mentored by Dr. Patricia Willey in the Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine, and Dr.
William Yoong in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Both mentors will provide mentorship in research design, biostatistics, study execution, and manuscript preparation. Dr. Willey will provide assistance in preparing the candidate for transition to independent research, and will participate in the Candidate's career development and research plans. Training program will be offered to a candidate with an MS and one year of post-doctoral experience in the Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine. Training will include didactic and hands-on experience in clinical research. In addition, the candidate will attend a course in clinical research methods at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. The candidate's career development plan includes a curriculum of courses in clinical research methods, as well as guidance for a relevant clinical research project, submission of research grant proposals, and continued mentorship by an independent clinical research mentor. The research plan is to develop novel strategies for prevention of perinatal mortality in low and middle income countries. The majority of this global mortality burden occurs during the first week of life. Preliminary data from the setting of the Partners in Progress Project, a randomized controlled trial for the prevention of neonatal mortality, indicate a dramatic benefit in the control arm.
