Preferred Version the statute of frauds, in that the contract involved a sale of land, specifically a sale of a fee simple title interest in land. In addition, the court found that the terms of the contract were sufficiently definite to comply with the statute of frauds, in that they set forth the boundaries and address of the property being sold. Lastly, the court found that the parol evidence offered by defendants was insufficient to overcome the terms of the written contract, in that defendants failed to establish that the parties did not intend to enter into a binding contract with the terms set forth in the contract. On appeal, defendants claim that the trial court erred in holding that the agreement between the parties did not violate the statute of frauds. The statute of frauds prohibits the enforcement of an oral contract for the sale of land unless it is in writing and signed by the person to be charged.
